Digital & Critical Infrastructure

Practice area under Energy and Infrastructure

Digitalisation, electrification and growing demands for resilient infrastructure are driving significant investment in new and existing critical infrastructure.

We advise investors, developers, operators and public-sector entities on the development, financing, acquisition and operation of digital and critical infrastructure, including data centres, telecommunications and fibre networks, airports and major transport infrastructure.

Working across Plesner's specialist practices, we combine transactional, regulatory and project expertise with advice on energy and grid access, permitting, construction and commercial arrangements. This enables us to advise on the increasingly complex interaction between digital infrastructure, energy systems and other critical infrastructure.

As an example, our work has included these matters:

- Femern A/S - Fehmarnbelt Fixed Link: Advised Femern A/S on the development and construction of the Fehmarnbelt fixed link between Denmark and Germany, including advice on major FIDIC-based construction contracts.
- Google: Advised Google on permitting and regulatory matters relating to the development of a data centre in Denmark, including requirements for commencing development works prior to obtaining relevant permits and approvals.
- Greenland Airports - Airport Infrastructure: Advised Greenland Airports on the development, financing and construction of three international airports in Greenland, one of the country's largest-ever infrastructure investments.
- Copenhagen Airports - Airport Development: Advised Copenhagen Airports on major airport development projects, including regulatory approvals, environmental matters and EU law aspects.
- TDC - Digital Infrastructure: Advised on the financing of the acquisition of TDC in one of Europe's largest infrastructure transactions, involving critical Danish telecommunications infrastructure.
- (Confidential) Major Fibre Network Operator - Fibre Infrastructure: Advised a major fibre network operator on tenders, contracts and procurement relating to fibre network upgrades and multiple fibre supply arrangements.
