Frederik advises on contractual law on a daily basis, in particular in the areas of construction, infrastructure and energy, and he assists both medium and large, national and international clients by providing advice and solving disputes on a regular basis.

Frederik is also a member of Plesner's Energy and Infrastructure team that meet weekly and keep up with both commercial and legal matters in the relevant sectors and every year organise network meetings for industry players on a regular basis for the purpose of discussing current themes in the market.

Frederik was previously an in-house lawyer with MT Højgaard and gained specific commercial-legal experience with respect to the building and construction sector. For more than two years he was involved in everything from negotiating and managing construction contracts to addressing and resolving construction law disputes.

Frederik will further be able to maintain and strengthen his academic qualifications through his participation in the research project "Digital Construction Law" at the University of Copenhagen during the period 2018-2020.
