Sophie is a manager in our Energy and Infrastructure team. Sophie advises Danish and international clients in the energy and infrastructure industry on all their legal and commercial challenges, including public law and environmental law issues.

PRACTICE AREAS

Energy and Infrastructure
Environmental Law and Planning Law
Public Law

Sophie has experience advising on planning and environmental issues relating to major urban development projects. Through her previous employment at a large renewable energy company, she has acquired sound knowledge of the processes and considerations which apply in connection with the development, establishment and operation of large-scale solar parks.

Sophie holds a law degree from the University of Copenhagen and has studied half a year at the University of Melbourne.

Teamwork is crucial for attorneys in the energy sector because of the multidisciplinary nature of the field. It involves navigating intricate regulatory environments, technical issues, environmental considerations, and financial aspects. Collaborating with other specialized legal professionals ensures comprehensive understanding, effective problem-solving, and informed decision-making.
