Andreas focuses on court cases and arbitration proceedings relating to the law of property, including in particular insurance law, construction law and the law of damages, as well as personal injury and occupational injury issues.

Andreas advises national and international enterprises in connection with legal proceedings and arbitration proceedings. Such advice is provided to key players in the building and construction industry, including technical consultants, employers and contractors at all stages of the building process.

In addition, Andreas lectures on the law of obligations at the University of Copenhagen's bachelor programme in law.

Andreas' previous involvement in property transactions and project development enables him to carry out efficient process management in connection with major projects.
