

Environmental, Social & Governance (ESG)

Practice area

In a world where sustainability and responsible business conduct become more and more prominent, ESG will become an important management and strategy tool for companies. Plesner offers specialised legal advice to assist your company navigate in complex ESG regulations and implement sustainable practices in a way that not only complies with the law but also promotes a positive social influence.

ESG – Environmental, Social and Governance – is not only an ethical issue, it is a crucial competition parameter. In other words, hardcore business and capital streams will increasingly be governed by companies' ESG compliance, strategy and innovation. Companies that are capable of working with ESG in a structured and strategic manner will be successful. ESG is multi-faceted, and we admit that it may be a jungle. ESG includes the following components:

Environmental liability: Concurrently with the global focus on climate changes, it is vital for companies to reduce their environmental footprints. Legal advice on ESG can guide your company through compliance with environmental legislation and encourage sustainable operating practices. Our experts have experience in relation to ESG in the built environment with an eye to the EU taxonomy and the practical approach in particular.

Social responsibility Companies' commitment to society and their treatment of employees create the basis for a strong brand and a loyal customer base. We advise on best practices in terms of employee rights, equality and inclusion in order that your company may be a positive force in society.

Governance: Strong management and transparent company structures are necessary to build trust with investors and stakeholders. Our experts assist in structuring your company in a manner supporting responsible management and ethics.

Working with ESG impacts society. By integrating ESG principles your company not only ensures compliance and sustainability but also contributes actively to a better world. It is our mission to guide and support your company during this transformation with in-depth expertise and dedicated service.
