

Life Science - Regulatory & IP

Practice area

The life sciences industry plays a crucial role in our society, both in improving public health and as a cornerstone of the Danish economy. Plesner's life sciences team is dedicated to helping industry players navigate the complex legal landscape in this field.

The life sciences industry is one of the most regulated industries, as the public must have secure access to safe and effective pharmaceuticals, medical devices, healthcare services, dietary supplements, cosmetics, and food. The rapid development, increasing demands, and growing complexity of regulation present a multitude of legal challenges that industry players must be able to navigate. This is where Plesner's life sciences team steps in, providing highly specialised legal advice in all of these specialised areas.

A distinctive feature of our life sciences team is that we collaborate closely across relevant legal areas, thereby offering our clients a holistic legal approach. We assist with all aspects within the field, including regulatory compliance and market access, drafting and negotiating contracts, conducting litigation, and handling investment and M&A processes.

As a result, we can simultaneously provide highly specialised legal advice across all parts of the life sciences area while keeping our clients' overall commercial interests in mind when dealing with complex project.

Throughout our firm's history of more than 100 years, Plesner has had the privilege of advising numerous national and international life sciences clients, where we have had the opportunity to assist in solving their most business-critical issues.
